USER PERSONAS

Funmi Adeyemi

- Age: 32
- Role: Senior Business Analyst at a fintech company
- Location: Lagos
- Income: About ₦800,000/month
- Work Week: 45+ hours, 8-9 hours seated, back-to-back meetings
- Tech comfort: Comfortable on mobile, but impatient: she abandons an app after one or two confusing taps

Typical Tuesday

She leaves home at 6:30am, spends the day in back-to-back calls, eats lunch at her desk, and gets home around 8pm with nothing left.

Core goals

- Mental clarity and stress relief: She wants to reset her head between meetings, not transform her body.
- Ease the neck and back stiffness from long desk hours.
- Feel in control of her health without adding another thing to manage.

Frustrations

- "My calendar is a wall of 30-minute calls with five minutes between them. A real workout means skipping lunch or leaving a meeting late."
- She opened a fitness app once and got confetti, badges and a "you're falling behind!" banner while already stressed. It felt like being graded.
- She paid for a gym for six months and went four times. With Lagos traffic, it felt like a second commute.
- She missed two days, saw her streak reset to zero, and deleted the app that evening.

Tunde Bello

- Age: 38
- Role: Operations Manager, logistics firm
- Location: Lagos
- Income: About ₦1,200,000/month
- Work Week: 45+ hours, about 9 hours seated, occasional Saturday shifts
- Tech comfort: Moderate. He's fine with WhatsApp and banking apps, but closes anything cluttered within seconds.

Typical Tuesday

He leaves at 6am to avoid the worst of the traffic and spends the morning in warehouse updates and approvals. By lunchtime he's been seated for four hours and his lower back has started to ache. He gets home at 7:30pm to homework, dinner and bath time. When the kids are finally asleep it's 9pm, and he sinks into the sofa with his phone, telling himself he'll start moving more next week.

Core goals

- He wants to stand up from his chair at 5pm without his lower back complaining.
- He wants enough energy left to play with his kids instead of collapsing on the sofa.
- He wants someone to show him the right way to do a move, so he stops second-guessing himself.

Frustrations

- "Every video I find is some 22-year-old jumping around. I'm scared I'll pull something."
- By the time the kids are in bed it's 9pm, so there's no "free hour" to schedule a workout into.
- He downloaded an app with 40 options on the home screen and closed it after ten seconds.
- His doctor told him to move more, but nobody explained what "more" means for someone chained to a desk nine hours a day.

Chioma Okafor

- Age: 26
- Role: Customer Success Associate, tech startup
- Location: Lagos
- Income: About ₦450,000/month
- Work Week: 40-45 hours, hybrid (three days at home, two in the office), constant client calls
- Tech comfort: High. She tries every new app, but has no patience for anything slow or data-heavy.

Typical Tuesday

She works from home on Tuesdays, so she skips the commute but not the pressure. Back-to-back client calls run from 9 to 5, and one tense escalation at 3pm leaves her wired for the rest of the day. At night she scrolls on her phone until 1am, replaying the call in her head. She wakes up tired, and she plans to "start the routine on Monday" for the third week in a row.

Core goals

- She wants to shake off a rough client call and feel calm enough to sleep that night.
- She wants a routine that survives past the two-week mark for once.
- She wants a bit of friendly accountability without being compared to strangers.

Frustrations

- "I download a new fitness app every month. By week two I've forgotten it exists."
- She tried a video-based app, and it ate half her data bundle before the first session finished.
- NEPA took the light mid-workout, the video froze, and she gave up for the day. Then the day became a week.
- A public leaderboard showed her ranked below people she'd never met, and that was the last time she opened it.

EMPATHY MAP

Says

- "I'll start exercising once this project is over."
- "I'm fine, I'm just tired. It's been a long week."
- "Can we push the call by ten minutes? I need to eat something."
- To her sister: "The gym is too far. By the time I get there, I'd have to turn around."
- To a friend: "I don't have time" (what she means is "I don't have energy").

Funmi Adeyemi, 32, Senior Business Analyst
Time-poor, stressed, wants to feel okay, not "fit"

Does

- Eats at her desk with one hand on the trackpad
- Rolls her shoulders and rubs her neck between calls without noticing
- Opens a fitness app, scrolls through the onboarding, and closes it
- Sets a "stretch" reminder on her phone and swipes it away during a meeting
- Doom-scrolls on the couch at night to switch off
- Keeps the gym bag in her car boot for weeks

Thinks

- "If I step away for five minutes, will anyone notice, or think I'm slacking?"
- "Everyone else seems to have this figured out, and I can't even manage a short walk."
- "Is this much sitting going to wreck my back before I'm 40?"
- "Another fitness app is another thing I'll quit."
- "I don't want to look different. I want my head to stop buzzing."

Feels

- At 10am: focused but already behind
- At 4pm: wired and foggy, with a tight neck and a head full of noise
- At 8pm: drained and a bit ashamed that she skipped it again
- Overall: guilty about not exercising and overwhelmed by everything else, so any extra demand feels heavy

Says

- "I'll start next week, once things settle at work."
- To his wife: "My back is just stiff, it's nothing."
- To a colleague: "I used to play football every weekend, you know."
- To his doctor: "Yes, I'll try to move more." (He nods but has no plan.)
- To his kids: "Daddy's tired, let's play tomorrow."

Tunde Bello, 38, Operations Manager
Wants to move more, afraid of doing it wrong

Does

- Sits through four-hour stretches without standing
- Presses his hand against his lower back when he finally gets up
- Downloads a fitness app, opens it once, then forgets it
- Watches exercise videos on YouTube without ever doing them
- Takes the lift even when the stairs are right there
- Falls asleep on the sofa with the TV on

Thinks

- "What if I do the wrong exercise and make my back worse?"
- "I'm too old to start jumping around like those people in the videos."
- "My father had back problems at this age, and I'm heading the same way."
- "If I take twenty minutes for myself, I'm taking it from my family."
- "I don't even know where to begin."

Feels

- At 10am: in control, busy and productive
- At 1pm: a dull ache in his back and growing discomfort
- At 7:30pm: exhausted, but guilty about being too tired for his kids
- At 9pm: quietly worried about his health, and frustrated with himself
- Overall: anxious about his body, embarrassed about being a beginner

Says

- "I'm restarting my fitness journey on Monday, for real this time."
- To a friend: "Let's do a challenge together, I need someone to keep me accountable."
- To her team: "Sorry, my network is acting up, give me a minute to reconnect."
- To her mum: "I'm eating fine, I'm just busy with work."
- After a bad call: "I'm okay, I'm okay, it's just a client being difficult."

Chioma Okafor, 26, Customer Success Associate
Starts strong, fades fast, needs calm more than a six-pack

Does

- Downloads a new fitness app and sets up her profile in one excited sitting
- Opens it daily for a week, then not at all
- Scrolls on her phone in bed until 1am
- Checks her data balance before opening any video
- Mutes notifications from apps that feel pushy
- Texts a friend "gym tomorrow?" and cancels the plan the next morning

Thinks

- "Why can't I stick with anything for more than two weeks?"
- "That escalation was my fault, and I'll be replaying it all night."
- "If my data runs out halfway through a workout video, I'm done."
- "Everyone on that leaderboard is doing better than me."
- "I just want to switch my brain off and sleep."

Feels

- At 9am: upbeat and ready to try
- At 3pm, after a tense call: wired, anxious and on edge
- At 11pm: restless, tired, unable to switch off
- Overall: pressured to "get it together" and embarrassed by her half-finished attempts, though she still wants to try again

SUMMARY

	Funmi	Tunde	Chioma
Main barrier	Time and mental load	Fear and uncertainty	Consistency and connectivity
Core need	A five-minute reset at her desk	Safe, clear guidance	Calm, light accountability, low-data use
Emotional state	Overwhelmed and guilty	Anxious and embarrassed	Pressured and restless